Dog's Good Karma Sets Her on Good Path

Downey, Calif Bluebell, the pit bull originally known as Prada, has survived some painful challenges in her one and-a-half years. She has overcome an advanced stage of an uncomfortable skin condition known as mange, and recovered physically from injuries sustained when she was dragged behind a pick-up truck while being transported to the animal shelter to be put to sleep by her owner.

"Bluebell kept her chin up and beamed with love and joy everyday she was with us here at SEAACA," said Captain Aaron Reyes, SEAACA's Director of Operations. "She loved her treatments, daily walks and was always very gentle with the pet toys scattered in her run." Reyes, said.

After two weeks screening potential adopters without success, Bluebell went to her new temporary home – Karma Rescue of Santa Monica. "Karma is a great place, and can do wonders re-homing Bluebell into the right family."

Our efforts to re-home her did not pan out for one reason or another ... either the fence was too short, the potential adopter had other dogs at home or they were not ready for the lifelong commitment. Fortunately, Karma stepped up and offered to continue caring for her while searching for the perfect home." Interested adopters may contact Karma Rescue at (310) 512-RUFF (7833) or www.karmarescue.org.

Bluebell greets Karma Rescue staff as SEAACA's Sr. Animal Care Technician Frank Villa says goodbye.
